Overarching aim: To improve outcomes for all children and young people, including those that currently present as vulnerable and those with SEND.

Education and Learning

Bracknell Forest Council

Learning Improvement Strategy

Summary

The Bracknell Forest 0-25 Years Learning Improvement Strategy (2026-31) has been developed in response to the evolving educational landscape and the need to address persistent achievement gaps for vulnerable children and those with special educational needs and disabilities (SEND). Despite the borough's overall prosperity and the high ratings of its schools, there remain significant disparities in educational outcomes for these groups. The strategy aims to create an inclusive, high-achieving education system that supports all learners, ensuring that every child and young person has the opportunity to thrive. By focusing on excellence, equity, and culture, the strategy seeks to build on existing strengths while addressing the unique challenges faced by vulnerable and SEND pupils.

The strategy has been developed as a result of extensive consultation with stakeholders, who share the responsibility for its implementation. The key stakeholders include: the local authority, maintained schools and academies, early years settings, Post 16 colleges, training providers, alternative provision providers, employers, and parents and carers. The strategy aims to foster a collaborative and inclusive approach to education, benefiting all children and young people, recognising that only by working in partnership can these persistent gaps be tackled.

The six priorities identified in the strategy are:

1. Promote a culture of inclusion and equity.
2. Support the development of an ambitious curriculum to raise standards and equip children and young people for a healthy and prosperous future.
3. Support children and young people to develop better physical, mental and emotional wellbeing, social skills and strong relationships.
4. Work in partnership to ensure that all children and young people attend a high-quality school or setting and have access to education and training that meets their needs.
5. Support all our children and young people to reach ambitious outcomes including through strong transitions from birth to adulthood.
6. Support the development of a skilled, knowledgeable, and confident workforce that is equipped to meet the needs of its children and young people.

To support the delivery and governance of this strategy, an Education Partnership Board will be established to bring together key stakeholders such as schools, academy trusts, colleges, training providers, early years providers, parents, and the dioceses. This board will collaborate to improve outcomes for children and young people in Bracknell Forest, fostering a culture of shared responsibility, especially for the most vulnerable.

The strategy will guide discussions within existing forums and channels, such as Headteacher Briefings and Early Years Provider Briefings. The Education and Learning section of the People Directorate will integrate relevant actions and performance indicators into their annual service plans, monitoring their impact through the local authority's service planning and reporting cycle.

Introduction

Cllr Roy Bailey

Cabinet Member for Children, Young People and Learning

I am delighted to be setting out our commitments and aspirations for the next five years in this plan.

Bracknell Forest is a great place to grow up. The borough is prosperous, green and safe. Our local schools are exceptional; all our schools are judged to be good or outstanding. But we know that despite all our best endeavours, the gap nationally for children and young people who currently present as vulnerable and for those with special educational needs (SEND) is not reducing. Bracknell Forest is no different and therefore this plan has a particular focus on these groups of children and young people (0-25 years old).

Dan Nicholls, a leading educationalist, states that 'we need to be more ferocious, more tenacious in creating the conditions that enable our ... disadvantaged learners to flourish.' He also places a specific focus on not just developing excellence but also ensuring equality and culture are in place in all schools and settings.

This plan sets out how we will work together to build an even more inclusive and high-achieving system of local schools and settings, trusted by our community, in which all our children and young people can succeed. We will be tenacious about how we support those who are currently presenting as vulnerable and support our schools to promote a positive culture to foster and celebrate achievement, respect equality, and reflect our diversity.

On behalf of the local authority, and the people we represent, I am happy to pledge all our effort to help all our schools, settings and all our children and young people to achieve the success they deserve.

The context for Bracknell schools and settings

Bracknell has great schools and settings, run by highly skilled and committed leaders and governors, who are managing a range of challenges. In June 2025, 100% of schools in Bracknell Forest were rated good or better by Ofsted, ranking Bracknell Forest 5th out of 164 local authorities nationally, against this measure.

Bracknell Forest is a small local authority with 38 schools, including an all-through special school. There are 29 primary schools, six secondary schools, one all-through academy and two special schools. By July 2025, 21 of these schools were academies, and the remaining 17 were local authority maintained. At the time of writing, there were 44 private, voluntary and independent (PVI) early years settings, 17 school nursery classes and 122 childminders are registered to deliver the early years entitlements (March 2025). 100% of PVI settings are graded good or better. There is one further education college, Bracknell and Wokingham College, which is part of Activate Learning, an Ofsted rated good education group with eight campuses across the surrounding authorities.

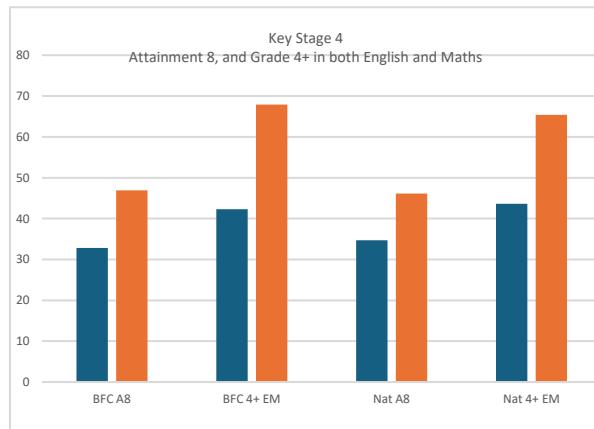

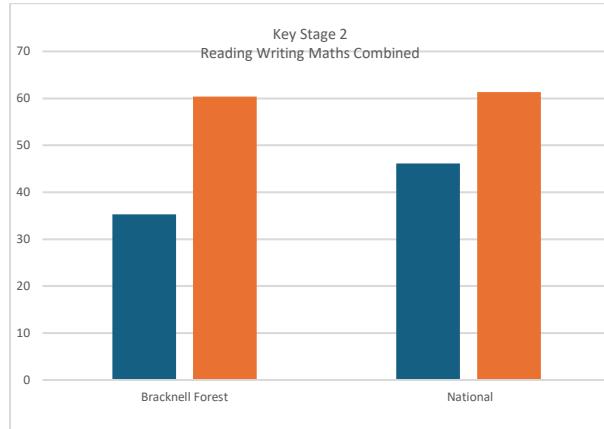

Overall, the data tells us that the majority of children and young people achieve well in Bracknell Forest, but children and young people who present as vulnerable and those with SEND do not achieve as well as their peers nationally. We know that this is a stubborn issue that persists despite the best efforts of the whole education community in Bracknell Forest. This gap does not discriminate; it exists in both good and outstanding schools and settings, and in both schools with high numbers of disadvantaged pupils, and those with smaller numbers. This data has shaped the priorities selected for this plan.

Pupil outcomes – Bracknell Forest vs. National at Key Stage 2 and Key Stage 4

Pupil outcomes – Disadvantaged pupils vs. all pupils

Disadvantaged pupils  All pupils

Bracknell Forest Council does not believe that the designation of a school Local Authority (LA maintained, Free School, MAT, Voluntary Aided or Controlled), is the key mechanism of ensuring that children and young people have the very best of educational outcomes. What is more important is the leadership within the school, the quality of learning and teaching, the relevance of the curriculum and how the school works as part of its community.

In a shifting national policy landscape, the LA still has a legal duty, 'to promote high standards and ensure that every child fulfils his or her educational potential.' We see our role as championing all children and young people, particularly those who currently present as vulnerable and those with special educational needs and disabilities (SEND).

We remain committed to supporting the 'family of Bracknell schools' with the Council playing a brokering role amongst schools and settings and between schools and key partners. Evidence shows us that successful partnerships can drive up standards, promote inclusion, and broaden opportunities for all. These partnerships are also crucial to keeping children and young people safe and well - physically and mentally.

An education strategy for all our children focussed on excellence, equity, and culture.

"The evidence is conclusive: equity in education pays off. The highest performing education systems... combine high quality and equity." (OECD 2012)

Our schools and settings in Bracknell Forest are involved in a continuous cycle of delivering excellence. There is plentiful evidence that schools/settings in Bracknell Forest offer strong provision for our young people and are effectively implementing research informed approaches to improve standards. The local authority works in partnership with schools and settings to support collaboration and to share best practice, innovation, and creativity.

Dan Nicholls has highlighted the value of seeking to support not only excellence, but equity and culture across schools and settings. He states that, 'In schools where under-resourced children thrive, the strength of culture and shared responsibility is evident and tangible, you feel it.' He states that 'whilst our strongest lever is an excellent education, this alone, is not enough. Schools also need to apply far greater equity, to be braver and fiercer to do different for under-resourced children, so that they are empowered and able to exploit the excellent education. An alchemy of excellence and equity.' Bracknell Forest wants to work in partnership with schools and settings in this endeavour with a focus on excellence, equity, and culture.

Our children who are currently presenting as vulnerable, and those with SEND, require not only our highest expectations but additional support so they feel equal and able to successfully access the excellence provided in our schools and settings in Bracknell Forest.

We do not underestimate the challenge of achieving this...

The priorities outlined in this strategy have been shaped by all stakeholders and will drive the delivery of the activities. We cannot do this alone – only working in partnership will support the delivery of our agreed priorities and actions. We will support schools and settings to collaborate and to build on the new ways of working, teaching, learning and develop a rich and relevant curriculum which prepares all children and young people for the future.

The key ingredients for achieving this aim are excellence, equity, and culture.

Children and young people that currently present as vulnerable: A Bracknell Forest definition

There are a variety of factors that have the potential to impact on children's access to the curriculum, both formal and informal, and therefore their outcomes.

This strategy aims to improve outcomes for those children and young people, who, for many different complex reasons, may find accessing their education and achieving strong outcomes more difficult.

While there is broad understanding of what is meant by children and young people with SEND, there is no overall definition for vulnerable groups. It is important to acknowledge that children and young people can face vulnerability and disadvantages at any time in their lives. For some children it can be entrenched or described as 'legacy disadvantage' across many areas of their lives and over a long period of time, whereas for others they may be presently experiencing disadvantage and vulnerability for a short time.

We should not underestimate the importance of the language that we use when talking about children and young people. Labels can create unconscious bias and set limitations on what children can achieve. Marc Rowland, leading educationalist, talks about how we need to 'get rid of the deficit discourse [...] around disadvantaged pupils. Disadvantaged children, young people and their families are not a problem to be solved. They are our pupils, and it is about us getting better at what we do to help them to thrive.' He emphasises that everyone must have the highest expectations for all children.

In recent years, the Office of the Children's Commissioner estimated that overall, there were 2.3 million vulnerable children growing up in Britain. Of this group, only a third were known to statutory services and two thirds were described by the Office of the Children's Commissioner as 'invisible'. It is our role to exercise our professional curiosity and judgement in identifying children and young people who are facing vulnerability.

These children and young people might include those who:

- are assessed as being in need under section 17 of the Children Act 1989, (including children and young people who have a child in need plan or a child protection plan) and children who are looked-after by the local authority
- on the edge of receiving support from children's social care services or who have previously received support from children's social care services (as identified by local authorities)
- that have been adopted
- placed on a special guardianship order or kinship care
- have identified special educational needs and/or disabilities
- at risk of becoming NEET (not in education, employment or training')
- living in temporary accommodation
- those who are young carers
- young people on the edge or in Youth Justice
- children who are severely absent or missing from education

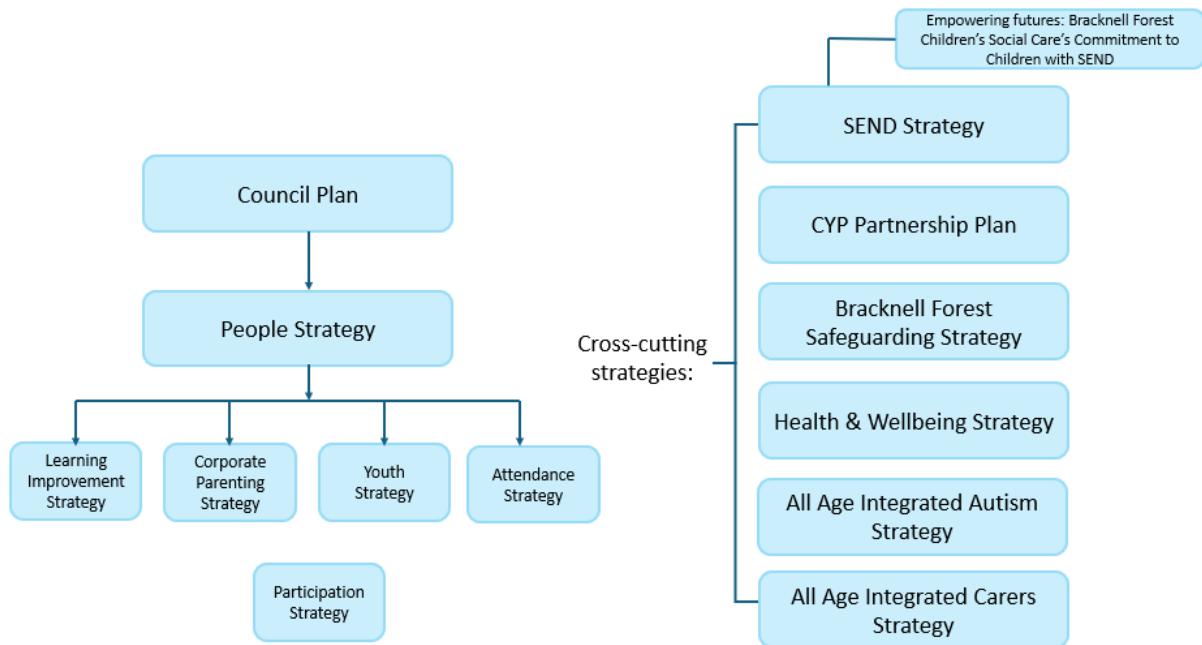

- children and young people in a family circumstance presenting challenges for them, such as drug and alcohol misuse, parental offending, adult mental health issues and domestic abuse
- those who are at risk of being disadvantaged because of the potential impact of living in a low-income family. These issues do not define pupils' educational experiences, but they can influence them.

This is not an exhaustive list, and schools and settings can determine who they feel are presenting as vulnerable and consider the support they need.

Implementation and monitoring

The responsibility for delivering this strategy lies with a range of stakeholders across the partnership. While some actions can be clearly assigned to the local authority, others fall under the responsibility of school leaders and are beyond the local authority's direct control. This strategy has been developed in consultation with these stakeholders, and its successful implementation relies on the collaborative efforts of all involved.

A key component of the strategy's delivery and governance is the establishment of an Education Partnership Board. This board will serve as a strategic forum, bringing together key stakeholders such as schools, academy trusts, colleges, training providers, early years providers, parents, and the dioceses. The board's purpose is to collaborate on improving outcomes for children and young people across Bracknell Forest. It will be instrumental in delivering the collective vision set out in this strategy.

Where appropriate, the Education and Learning section of the People Directorate will map the relevant actions and performance indicators into their annual service plans over the next five years and monitor their impact through the local authority's service planning and reporting cycle.

This strategy will underpin collaborative working across schools and settings, fostering a culture of shared responsibility for all children in Bracknell Forest, especially those who are most vulnerable.

If necessary, the strategy will be adapted to acknowledge any legislative changes or national priorities that may significantly affect planned activities or the ongoing development of associated Bracknell Forest strategies.
